COMPOSITION1

As we come to the end of this memorable day, I want to take a moment to look around and appreciate the people who made it special. This morning, many of us arrived not knowing what to expect, maybe feeling a bit nervous or competitive. But as the day ended, we found ourselves sharing stories over lunch, encouraging each other during the games, and realizing that what unites us is far greater than what sets us apart.

Saying goodbye is never easy, especially after making new friends and unforgettable memories. Today wasn't just about competition or learning—it was about building connections that we hope will last long after you leave. We hope our hospitality made you feel at home and that you leave with both new friendships and fond memories.

And now colleagues, on behalf of everyone here, I wish you all the best. Have a safe journey back to your school."

COMPOSITION 2

To make this speech a bit longer while keeping the language simple and natural, we can add some specific "human" details. This helps it sound like it's coming from a real person's observations rather than a computer.

COMPOSITION 2

"I want to take a moment to talk about someone who has truly inspired us all. When she first started here, she was just like anyone else—full of dreams and maybe a little bit of nerves. You could see it in the way she walked down the halls, always a bit quiet, just trying to find her way.

But as time went on, we started to see what she was really made of. She spent many late nights studying while others were resting, and she always had a kind word for anyone who was struggling. Even when things got difficult or the work felt like too much, she never complained. Instead, she stayed focused. She was the kind of person who would stay back after class to help a friend understand a lesson, or the first one to volunteer when a project needed an extra pair of hands.

At the time, she didn't see herself as a leader. She didn't seek out the spotlight or ask for praise. She just did the work because she loved it and because she cared about her community. She didn't realize that every small step she took was building a bridge to a much bigger future. She was just taking it one day at a time, trying to be the best version of herself.

Looking at where she stands today, it is clear that all those quiet moments of hard work turned into a great success. We see her now as a person of strength and achievement, but it's important to remember where it all began. Back when she was just starting out, she never knew that it would come to pass."
